

KING GEORGE THE FIRST KING OF HELSTON

This is the information that shapes the character that you are to play tonight. Take time to study the information on this page and begin to develop the character you will be. Although you will not, and should not, be reading this information to other people, you will probably reveal all of it at some time during the evening's discussions. Again, you shouldn't show this booklet to anyone for any reason. Feel free to refer to this information during the evening's investigation.

You were placed on the throne fifteen years ago when King Regibald died in battle. You were his most trusted adviser, and seeing that there were no known relatives who survived the battles, he made a royal proclamation that placed you on the throne just before he died.

You have ruled firmly, but justly. You have tried to be a kind king, honoring hard work and a strong dedication to your kingdom. You have executed many thieves, traitors, and scoundrels. You are well-loved by your subjects, but you know that many have chosen to hide their true feelings for the unprecedented way you have been put on the throne. Your manner of speech exhibits your kindness, but you're always on the verge of adding force to your voice to get your point firmly across. You have never shouted at your subjects, but that is only because none have brought you to the point where that was warranted.

You know that some of your most hated enemies came to your castle for the feast you are celebrating tonight. Only two of them have made it into the room tonight. Alistair, the black knight, and his wench Belinda, have snuck into your feast and you are to watch them closely. Trust nothing that they say, deny every accusation that they make, and do whatever you can to make the others in the room share your poor opinion of them.

You must yield your power to the moderator and the royal magistrates that you have assigned to lead the investigation and find out who the traitor is. You are still in authority. You just have to let them control the way the investigation flows. Feel free to interrupt at any time you feel that they are not doing you, and your position, the justice or respect it deserves, but remember that it is they who are in charge of the investigation.

You will be given further character information in other secret clues as the game progresses. Be sure to keep the clues, and this player booklet to yourself.

If you have any questions on your player profile, see the moderator.

QUEEN MARIONETTE QUEEN OF HELSTON

This is the information that shapes the character that you are to play tonight. Take time to study the information on this page and begin to develop the character you will play tonight. Although you will not, and should not, be reading this information to other people, you will probably reveal all of it at some time during the evening's discussions. Again, you shouldn't show this booklet to anyone for any reason. Feel free to refer to this information during the evening's investigation.

You and your husband were placed on the throne fifteen years ago when King Regibald died in battle. Your husband was his most trusted adviser, and seeing that there were no known relatives who survived the battles, he made a royal proclamation that placed you and your husband on the throne just before he died.

You and your husband have ruled firmly, but justly. You have tried to be a kind queen, honoring hard work and a strong dedication to your kingdom. You have executed many thieves, traitors, and scoundrels. You are well-loved by your subjects, but you know that many have chosen to hide their true feelings for the unprecedented way you have been put on the throne. Your manner of speech exhibits your kindness, but you're always on the verge of adding force to your voice to get your point firmly across. You have never shouted at your subjects, but that is only because none have brought you to the point where that was warranted.

You know that some of your most hated enemies came to your castle for the feast you are celebrating tonight. Only two of them have made it into the room tonight. Alistair, the black knight, and his wench Belinda, have snuck into your feast and you are to watch them closely. Trust nothing that they say, deny every accusation that they make, and do whatever you can to make the others in the room share your poor opinion of them.

You must yield your power to the moderator and the royal magistrates that you have assigned to lead the investigation and find out who the traitor is. You are still in authority. You just have to let them control the way the investigation flows. Feel free to interrupt at any time you feel that they are not doing you, and your position, the justice or respect it deserves, but remember that it is they who are in charge of the investigation.

You will be given further character information in other secret clues as the game progresses. Be sure to keep the clues, and this player booklet to yourself.

If you have any questions on your player profile, see the moderator.

SIR JOHN OF TRUTH A ROYAL KNIGHT

This is the information that shapes the character that you are to play tonight. Take time to study the information on this page and begin to develop the character you will play tonight. Although you will not, and should not, be reading this information to other people, you will probably reveal all of it at some time during the evening's discussions. Again, you shouldn't show this booklet to anyone for any reason. Feel free to refer to this information during the evening's investigation.

You were a loyal subject of King Regibald before he died in battle. You devoted your life to learning the skills it took to become a good knight and you were well schooled in hand-to-hand combat, technique, and strategy. In your youth your strength was unequaled. You proudly served King Regibald in his army, protecting him whenever you were called on to serve your king. You loved your king and were true to him in every way.

Before King Regibald died it was believed that he proclaimed that Sir George was to become the next king. You instantly vowed your allegiance to the new king, King George the First, and have done everything you can to protect him ever since.

You know that some of King George the First's most hated enemies came to the castle for the feast you are celebrating tonight. You have noticed that only one of them have made it into the room tonight, that you know of. Alistair, the black knight, and Belinda, his wench, have snuck into the feast and you are to watch them closely. Trust nothing that they say, deny every accusation that they make, and do whatever you can to make the others in the room share your poor opinion of them.

You also have reasons to distrust the blacksmith, the baker, the innkeeper, his wife, and the two peasants. Common people cannot be trusted, no matter what they say.

You suspect that others may be out to get the king, so do your best to uphold the honor of King George the First and fend off any who show any disrespect to the throne.

You will be given further character information in other secret clues as the game progresses. Be sure to keep the clues, and this player booklet to yourself.

If you have any questions on your player profile, see the moderator.

RACHEL LADY OF ACTON

This is the information that shapes the character that you are to play tonight. Take time to study the information on this page and begin to develop the character you will play tonight. Although you will not, and should not, be reading this information to other people, you will probably reveal all of it at some time during the evening's discussions. Again, you shouldn't show this booklet to anyone for any reason. Feel free to refer to this information during the evening's investigation.

You are the wife of Sir John of Truth, the Good Knight. He has been a valiant warrior and confidant to King Regibald and King George the First. The two of you have lived a life of ease in the castle, you more than he.

Most of your days are spent looking after the children in the castle, helping them with their lessons, watching them play, disciplining them, and teaching them the ten commandments, and the other teachings of the Bible.

Your kind and patient personality causes others to come to you for advice. You have given private counsel to most of those in the room. Queen Marionette has come to you often in search for advice, as have the other women of nobility who are now gathered in the room. You are always available to hear their concerns and to offer your opinion as to ways to solve their dilemmas.

You know that your problem solving skills could come in handy at a time like this, but your offer to help the King has been flatly rejected. You wonder if there is an undisclosed reason for this and should look for any evidence of that fact which you may find.

Many of the things that have been shared with you reveal weaknesses of many who are now gathered in the room. You have vowed to keep these things secret, but one can't be expected to keep such things secret when one's integrity is being attacked by those same people. Don't be afraid to defend yourself by revealing some dirt on others, especially those who discount your ability to solve problems.

You will be given further character information in other secret clues as the game progresses. Be sure to keep the clues, and this player booklet to yourself.

If you have any questions on your player profile, see the moderator.

GRAYSON LORD OF COVENTRY

This is the information that shapes the character that you are to play tonight. Take time to study the information on this page and begin to develop the character you will play tonight. Although you will not, and should not, be reading this information to other people, you will probably reveal all of it at some time during the evening's discussions. Again, you shouldn't show this booklet to anyone for any reason. Feel free to refer to this information during the evening's investigation.

You are a powerful lord and landowner within King George the First's kingdom. Because of your power and wealth you have been welcomed into the king's inner circle of power. He shares a friendship with you that many covet, but can only dream of. Your manner of speech conveys your position of authority and membership among the upper class of society.

Many people believe that you are an evil man because of the way in which you use your power to get your way. There is very little you want, for when you want something, you only have to take it from those whom you are lord over. Many resent you for the unscrupulous way that you take from those who are under you just to satisfy your own greed. They don't know what it's like to be you, so how can they judge you for the way you act?

You have very little tolerance for people of the lower classes. They are continually seeking your time, your money, your advice, and your land. The idea that common people are now in this room along with you causes your skin to crawl.

There are those in the room with whom you are good friends. Braxton, the Head of the Royal Army, and his wife, Ebba, Sir John of Truth and his wife, Rachel, are good friends of yours. You spend a good deal of leisure time with them. And, of course, you are good friends with King George the First and his wife, the Queen Marionette. You have very little in common with Halstead and Heather, Lord and Lady of Canterbury and in fact claim them as fierce enemies. Do what you can to confer with your friends and keep from Halstead, Heather, and the commoners - they cannot be trusted.

You will be given further character information in other secret clues as the game progresses. Be sure to keep the clues, and this player booklet to yourself.

If you have any questions on your player profile, see the moderator.

ABIGAL LADY OF COVENTRY

This is the information that shapes the character that you are to play tonight. Take time to study the information on this page and begin to develop the character you will play tonight. Although you will not, and should not, be reading this information to other people, you will probably reveal all of it at some time during the evening's discussions. Again, you shouldn't show this booklet to anyone for any reason. Feel free to refer to this information during the evening's investigation.

You are the wife of a powerful lord and landowner within King George the First's kingdom. Because of your husband's power and wealth the two of you have been welcomed into the king's inner circle of power. He shares a friendship with your husband that many covet, but can only dream of. You have a friendship with Queen Marionette that women covet, but can only dream of. You're not afraid to flaunt your privileges, in fact, you do flaunt them every chance you get. Your manner of speech conveys your position of authority and membership among the upper class of society.

Many people believe that your husband is an evil man, and that you aid him in his plight of terror, because of the way the two of you use your power to get your way. There is very little you want, for when you want something, you only have to take it from those your husband is lord over. Many resent you for the unscrupulous way in which you take from those who are under you just to satisfy your own greed. They don't know what it's like to be you, so how can they judge you for the way you act?

You have very little tolerance for people of the lower classes. They are continually seeking your time, your money, your advice, and your land. The idea that common people are now in this room along with you causes your skin to crawl.

There are those in the room with whom you are good friends. Braxton, the Head of the Royal Army, and his wife, Ebba, Sir John of Truth and his wife, Rachel, are good friends of yours. You spend a good deal of leisure time with them. And, of course, you are good friends with King George the First and his wife, the Queen Marionette. You have very little in common with Halstead and Heather, Lord and Lady of Canterbury and in fact claim them as fierce enemies. Do what you can to confer with your friends and keep from Halstead, Heather, and the commoners - they cannot be trusted.

You will be given further character information in other secret clues as the game progresses. Be sure to keep the clues, and this player booklet to yourself.

If you have any questions on your player profile, see the moderator.

HALSTEAD LORD OF CANTERBURY

This is the information that shapes the character that you are to play tonight. Take time to study the information on this page and begin to develop the character you will play tonight. Although you will not, and should not, be reading this information to other people, you will probably reveal all of it at some time during the evening's discussions. Again, you shouldn't show this booklet to anyone for any reason. Feel free to refer to this information during the evening's investigation.

The good Lord in heaven has chosen to bless you with land, money, and resources that provide you with far more than you need. Rather than let your riches and power go to your head, you have chosen to lord over those who are under you in a way that mimics the example given by God. He came to serve those He created and in the same way you do what you can to serve those who have been placed under your power.

You have many people living on the land that you own. They pay you to work the land, to grow crops, to raise livestock, to build, and to do whatever they can to better the land that you have allowed them to settle on. Rather than take the money and tell them what to do, you have given them the ability to choose how they use the land, and how they wish to repay you for the opportunity to use it. You also take every opportunity given to you to lower yourself to their level and aid them in the development of your land. You have been known to walk behind an ox, plowing the land, or walking the crops at harvest time, helping with the harvest. You make visits of those working your land, you speak with them, you help them through their hard times, you do what you can to better their life, and you expect very little in return. Because of the way that you have chosen to lord over what you have been given, those who are under you have chosen to repay you far beyond what you would have expected. It seems as if your riches grow proportionately to the time you invest yourself into the lives of your subjects.

You are the only lord you have ever heard of who treats his subjects with respect and kindness. You have been considered an outcast by the upper class because of this unprecedented manner in which you "live amongst the poor." Don't let the jests offered by others in the room get to you. Keep your cool, present your arguments with a calm heart, and hope that you can convince them that your way is better without getting into a heated debate. Remember, it is only by the grace of God that you have been given what you now have. You can't expect others to understand why you do the things you do.

You will be given further character information in other secret clues as the game progresses. Be sure to keep the clues, and this player booklet to yourself.

If you have any questions on your player profile, see the moderator.

HEATHER LADY OF CANTERBURY

This is the information that shapes the character that you are to play tonight. Take time to study the information on this page and begin to develop the character you will play tonight. Although you will not, and should not, be reading this information to other people, you will probably reveal all of it at some time during the evening's discussions. Again, you shouldn't show this booklet to anyone for any reason. Feel free to refer to this information during the evening's investigation.

The good Lord in heaven has chosen to bless you and your husband with land, money, and resources that provide you with far more than you need. Rather than let your riches and power go to your husband's head, he has chosen to lord over those who are under him in a way that mimics the example given by God. He came to serve those he created and in the same way you and your husband do what you can to serve those who have been placed under your power.

You have many people living on the land that you own. They pay you to work the land, to grow crops, to raise livestock, to build, and to do whatever they can to better the land that you have allowed them to settle on. Rather than take the money and tell them what to do, you have given them the ability to choose how they use the land, and how they wish to repay you for the opportunity to use it. You and your husband also take every opportunity given to you to lower yourself to their level and aid them in the development of your land. You have been known to visit the elderly, the sick, the newborn, and the newly wed to offer whatever kind of assistance you can, and you expect very little in return. Because of the way that you and your husband have chosen to lord over what you have been given, those who are under you have chosen to repay you far beyond what you would have expected. It seems as if your riches grow proportionately to the time you invest yourself into the lives of your subjects.

You and your husband are the only lords you have ever heard of who treat their subjects with respect and kindness. You have been considered an outcast by the upper class because of this unprecedented manner in which you "live amongst the poor." Don't let the jests offered by others in the room get to you. Keep your cool, present your arguments with a calm heart, and hope that you can convince them that your way is better without getting into a heated debate. Remember, it is only by the grace of God that you have been given what you now have. You can't expect others to understand why you do the things you do.

You will be given further character information in other secret clues as the game progresses. Be sure to keep the clues, and this player booklet to yourself.

If you have any questions on your player profile, see the moderator.

BRAXTON HEAD OF THE ROYAL ARMY

This is the information that shapes the character that you are to play tonight. Take time to study the information on this page and begin to develop the character you will play tonight. Although you will not, and should not, be reading this information to other people, you will probably reveal all of it at some time during the evening's discussions. Again, you shouldn't show this booklet to anyone for any reason. Feel free to refer to this information during the evening's investigation.

Weakness isn't something that sits well with you. You have been in positions of authority for long as you can remember. It was upon your 14th birthday that you were accepted into the inner circle of the King's army. Since that time you have been developing your arm-to-arm combat skills and strategic mind. Your development has furthered your abilities and reputation to the point where you were appointed the Head of the Royal Army. You are known throughout the region as the best strategist and many fear facing you and your army because of it.

You have fought for everything that you have gained in your life, you feel as if your hard work has paid off, and you hate to see people get things that they haven't earned. You have very little time and energy for the poor. In your opinion they get what they deserve. If they wanted more in life than they should have worked and earned it. You did, they can do it too, if they chose to do so.

Alistair, the black knight, who is also in this room today is a friend of yours. The two of you worked together before he was thrown out of the kingdom. You would do anything to have him back on your side, but you know that he has little interest in serving the king who banned him. But now that King Regibald has died, and you have found Alistair again, try to convince him that he would be an asset to King George the First and his royal army.

You will be given further character information in other secret clues as the game progresses. Be sure to keep the clues, and this player booklet to yourself.

If you have any questions on your player profile, see the moderator.

EBBA WIFE OF THE HEAD OF THE ROYAL ARMY

This is the information that shapes the character that you are to play tonight. Take time to study the information on this page and begin to develop the character you will play tonight. Although you will not, and should not, be reading this information to other people, you will probably reveal all of it at some time during the evening's discussions. Again, you shouldn't show this booklet to anyone for any reason. Feel free to refer to this information during the evening's investigation.

You are the wife of Braxton. He is the Head of the Royal Army. Just looking at him brings fear to the enemy, for he is powerful and mighty, cunning and strong. He is reputed to be the best war strategist and he is feared by all who live in your region of the world. But you know that he is a good man at heart, even though he hasn't ever shown that side of himself.

You know that he has little tolerance for the weak members of the lower class. He lives in luxury while oppressing the peasants of the land. You, on the other hand, are intolerant of the wealthy land owners who lord their power over their subjects and do whatever you can to help out those who are less fortunate in the kingdom. Quite often you visit with Halstead and Heather, who are people you respect, and go out among the peasants to see what their lives are like and help them however you can. Your husband doesn't know about this, but you may want to use this opportunity to let others know that you are much different than your husband.

You will be given further character information in other secret clues as the game progresses. Be sure to keep the clues, and this player booklet to yourself.

If you have any questions on your player profile, see the moderator.

PUG OWNER AND OPERATOR OF THE LOCAL PUB

This is the information that shapes the character that you are to play tonight. Take time to study the information on this page and begin to develop the character you will play tonight. Although you will not, and should not, be reading this information to other people, you will probably reveal all of it at some time during the evening's discussions. Again, you shouldn't show this booklet to anyone for any reason. Feel free to refer to this information during the evening's investigation.

You and your partner are the operators of the local pub. Now, just to remind you, you are sick and tired of people who only give you credit as a bartender. They seem to forget that you provide many services besides the ale you dole out each Friday night. As the center of the social life of the town, the pub offers the only place to get a good home cooked meal, a clean and quiet place to sleep for the night, not to mention the live entertainment featured on weekends. What would this small town do without the stand-up jester competitions, wench/queen look-a-like contests, and other various acts you and your partner bring into town to appease the working class.

Like you're not a member of the working class! Work is all you do. You're up before dawn to prepare breakfast for whoever decides to stumble in for a meal before they begin their own hard day working. Then it's clearing the tables, cleaning the dishes, beginning to prepare lunch, while cleaning up the rooms that had been used that night (that is if the guests have woken up from their drunken stupor), and then the cycle continues until well after midnight when you close up the pub and get to bed yourself. Your aggressive demeanor has to be held in check most of the day so you don't offend your customers, but you have been known to exhibit your temper when you are stuck in high stress situations such as the one you are stuck in right now.

You will be given further character information in other secret clues as the game progresses. Be sure to keep the clues, and this player booklet to yourself.

If you have any questions on your player profile, see the moderator.

YETTA OWNER AND OPERATOR OF THE LOCAL PUB

This is the information that shapes the character that you are to play tonight. Take time to study the information on this page and begin to develop the character you will play tonight. Although you will not, and should not, be reading this information to other people, you will probably reveal all of it at some time during the evening's discussions. Again, you shouldn't show this booklet to anyone for any reason. Feel free to refer to this information during the evening's investigation.

You and your partner are the operators of the local pub. Now, just to remind you, you are sick and tired of people who only give you credit as a waitress and bar maid. They seem to forget that you provide many services besides the food and ale you dole out each Friday night. As the center of the social life of the town, the pub offers the only place to get a good home cooked meal, a clean and quiet place to sleep for the night, not to mention the live entertainment featured on weekends. What would this small town do without the stand-up jester competitions, wench/queen look-a-like contests, and other various acts you and your partner bring into town to appease the working class.

Like you're not a member of the working class! Work is all you do. You're up before dawn to prepare breakfast for whoever decides to stumble in for a meal before they begin their own hard day working. Then it's clearing the tables, cleaning the dishes, beginning to prepare lunch, while cleaning up the rooms that had been used that night (that is if the guests have woken up from their drunken stupor), and then the cycle continues until well after midnight when you close up the pub and get to bed yourself. Your aggressive demeanor has to be held in check most of the day so you don't offend your customers, but you have been known to exhibit your temper when you are stuck in high stress situations such as the one you are stuck in right now.

You will be given further character information in other secret clues as the game progresses. Be sure to keep the clues, and this player booklet to yourself.

If you have any questions on your player profile, see the moderator.

ALISTAIR THE BLACK KNIGHT

This is the information that shapes the character that you are to play tonight. Take time to study the information on this page and begin to develop the character you will play tonight. Although you will not, and should not, be reading this information to other people, you will probably reveal all of it at some time during the evening's discussions. Again, you shouldn't show this booklet to anyone for any reason. Feel free to refer to this information during the evening's investigation.

You weren't always the bad guy. In fact, you used to be one of King Regibald's most trusted advisers until he determined that you were giving him bad advice in an attempt to take over the throne. He was right, but you never admitted it. From that point on you decided that as long as you were going to be labeled a bad guy you might as well be as bad as you could be.

Since you have decided to be an enemy to the king you have made enemies with many of the people in the room today. Anyone who claims to be a friend of the king is an enemy of yours. They know that you weren't invited to come to the evening feast tonight, and in fact you weren't invited. You snuck into the great hall and were caught by the guards. Rather than send you to the dungeon, or kick you out of the castle, the magistrate ordered you into the banquet room. You still aren't too sure why he chose to do this.

Belinda, the woman you affectionately call your wench, accompanied you to the castle and is also in the room with you right now. She is your closest friend and true confidant. She is your partner in crime and knows of your motives, methods, and intentions. She is the only one in the room that you can trust.

Oh, there is one other person in the room you can trust, Braxton, Head of the Royal Army. He was a good friend and confidant of yours before you were kicked out of the kingdom, he really wants you to be a high ranking official in King George's army, but you're not sure if that's such a good idea. Remain open to the idea, but remain reluctant in the way you present yourself to him. You wouldn't want to give up your free and careless life too easily.

You will be given further character information in other secret clues as the game progresses. Be sure to keep the clues, and this player booklet to yourself.

If you have any questions on your player profile, see the moderator.

BELINDA THE WENCH

This is the information that shapes the character that you are to play tonight. Take time to study the information on this page and begin to develop the character you will play tonight. Although you will not, and should not, be reading this information to other people, you will probably reveal all of it at some time during the evening's discussions. Again, you shouldn't show this booklet to anyone for any reason. Feel free to refer to this information during the evening's investigation.

You never intended to become an enemy of the king. It's just that you never really fit in with the other girls in your village. It wasn't that you wanted to be a bad girl, you just wanted to do things your own way. You drifted farther and farther until you were completely alienated from your friends, family, and village.

That was when you met Alistair, the black knight. The two of you became friends in no time at all. Soon after the two of you were collaborating on crimes and relishing the spoils of those crimes. Your reputation preceded you. You were known as a pair to be feared and you were able to do as you pleased everywhere you went.

Having pillaged just about every village in King George the First's kingdom, you have set your sights upon dethroning the king and putting Alistair upon the throne in his place. He was once one of King Regibald's most trusted advisers until the king accused him of giving him bad advice in an attempt to take over the throne. He was right, but Alistair never admitted it. From that point on Alistair decided that as long as he was going to be labeled a bad guy he might as well be as bad as he could be and you were more than happy to join him.

Since the two of you have decided to be an enemy to the king you have made enemies with many of the people in the room today. Anyone who claims to be a friend of the king is an enemy of yours. They know that you weren't invited to come to the feast tonight, and in fact you weren't invited. You snuck into the great hall and were caught by the guards. Rather than send you to the dungeon, or kick you out of the castle, the magistrate ordered you into the banquet room. You still aren't too sure why he chose to do this. You must be on your guard at all times.

You will be given further character information in other secret clues as the game progresses. Be sure to keep the clues, and this player booklet to yourself.

If you have any questions on your player profile, see the moderator.

SMEDLEY THE ROYAL BLACKSMITH

This is the information that shapes the character that you are to play tonight. Take time to study the information on this page and begin to develop the character you will play tonight. Although you will not, and should not, be reading this information to other people, you will probably reveal all of it at some time during the evening's discussions. Again, you shouldn't show this booklet to anyone for any reason. Feel free to refer to this information during the evening's investigation.

You are a simple man who cares little for the life of royalty. You were raised to respect the throne, those who sit upon it, and you befriend all those who claim loyalty to it. You have been the official blacksmith to the king for many years. You now spend most of your day fashioning weaponry, shoeing horses, fixing wagons, and inventing new things to make the life of the king and queen easier. You are very satisfied with your life. You feel challenged by what you are doing and you feel well compensated, both monetarily and in the knowledge that you are bettering the kingdom through the work you are doing.

You have been invited to this banquet as a way of thanking you for the years of faithful service you have provided. Your loyalty to the king has never been questioned and you dislike and distrust all those who are not loyal to your king.

You will be given further character information in other secret clues as the game progresses. Be sure to keep the clues, and this player booklet to yourself.

If you have any questions on your player profile, see the moderator.

RAE THE ROYAL BAKER

This is the information that shapes the character that you are to play tonight. Take time to study the information on this page and begin to develop the character you will play tonight. Although you will not, and should not, be reading this information to other people, you will probably reveal all of it at some time during the evening's discussions. Again, you shouldn't show this booklet to anyone for any reason. Feel free to refer to this information during the evening's investigation.

You are a simple person who cares little for the life of royalty. You were raised to respect the throne, those who sit upon it, and you befriend all those who claim loyalty to it. You have been the official baker to the king for many years. You now spend most of your day baking for the king, the queen, and those who are dining with them. You are very satisfied with your life. You feel challenged by what you are doing and you feel well compensated, both monetarily and in the knowledge that you are bettering the kingdom through the work you are doing.

You have been invited to this banquet as a way of thanking you for the years of faithful service you have provided. Your loyalty to the king has never been questioned and you dislike and distrust all those who are not loyal to your king.

You will be given further character information in other secret clues as the game progresses. Be sure to keep the clues, and this player booklet to yourself.

If you have any questions on your player profile, see the moderator.

FLETCHER THE PEASANT

This is the information that shapes the character that you are to play tonight. Take time to study the information on this page and begin to develop the character you will play tonight. Although you will not, and should not, be reading this information to other people, you will probably reveal all of it at some time during the evening's discussions. Again, you shouldn't show this booklet to anyone for any reason. Feel free to refer to this information during the evening's investigation.

You are a simple peasant. You have been a simple peasant all of your life. You spend most of your days preparing to take things to the market to sell or barter in order to get the things you need for your family to survive. Although you live a hard life, you sleep each night satisfied that you have lived an honest day, and knowing that you have another opportunity to live another honest day tomorrow. You have very little aspirations. You only wish to quietly make your way through life without disturbing anyone. So far you have succeeded.

You remain unmarried only because the demands of your own family occupy your every waking minute. You and your sister do everything you can to help out your ailing mother. You are dedicated to taking care of your mother for she dedicated her life to raising you as best she could even though she had to sacrifice everything she had to do it.

Your sister is here with you in this room today. Neither of you expected to be here. You were in the market place selling your wares when a magistrate of the King grabbed you and told you that you were going to dine with the king tonight. It seems as if the king has a tradition that was in jeopardy of ending today and you were chosen to ensure that it didn't. It is said that a meal has yet to be served at the king's table where there was an empty seat. Tonight there were two empty seats and the magistrate was ordered to fill them. I guess you and your sister are the lucky ones.

Remember, your simple and kind demeanor is a stark contrast to many of the rude and more vocal people in the room.

You will be given further character information in other secret clues as the game progresses. Be sure to keep the clues, and this player booklet to yourself.

If you have any questions on your player profile, see the moderator.

DARBY THE PEASANT

This is the information that shapes the character that you are to play tonight. Take time to study the information on this page and begin to develop the character you will play tonight. Although you will not, and should not, be reading this information to other people, you will probably reveal all of it at some time during the evening's discussions. Again, you shouldn't show this booklet to anyone for any reason. Feel free to refer to this information during the evening's investigation.

You are a simple peasant. You have been a simple peasant all of your life. You spend most of your days preparing to take things to the market to sell or barter in order to get the things you need for your family to survive. Although you live a hard life, you sleep each night satisfied that you have lived an honest day, and knowing that you have another opportunity to live another honest day tomorrow. You have very little aspirations. You only wish to quietly make your way through life without disturbing anyone. So far you have succeeded.

You remain unmarried only because the demands of your own family occupy your every waking minute. You and your brother do everything you can to help out your ailing mother. You are dedicated to taking care of your mother for she dedicated her life to raising you as best she could even though she had to sacrifice everything she had to do it.

Your brother is here with you in this room today. Neither of you expected to be here. You were in the market place selling your wares when a magistrate of the King grabbed you and told you that you were going to dine with the king. It seems as if the king has a tradition that was in jeopardy of ending today and you were chosen to ensure that it didn't. It is said that a meal has yet to be served at the king's table where there was an empty seat. Tonight there were two empty seats and the magistrate was ordered to fill them. I guess you and your brother are the lucky ones.

Remember, your simple and kind demeanor is a stark contrast to many of the rude and more vocal people in the room.

You will be given further character information in other secret clues as the game progresses. Be sure to keep the clues, and this player booklet to yourself.

If you have any questions on your player profile, see the moderator.

FISK ROYAL JESTER

This is the information that shapes the character that you are to play tonight. Take time to study the information on this page and begin to develop the character you will play tonight. Although you will not, and should not, be reading this information to other people, you will probably reveal all of it at some time during the evening's discussions. Again, you shouldn't show this booklet to anyone for any reason. Feel free to refer to this information during the evening's investigation.

You are one of two Royal Court Jesters. The two of you work as a team. Your partner, Fester, (as you probably know) is also in the room today. You have been the Royal Court Jesters since you were discovered at a stand up jester competition at the town pub. Since that day you have been entertaining King George the First, Queen Marionette, the officials of the court, and their guests. Your talents go beyond humor. You are talented in other performing arts and you regularly combine them to make interesting productions that are always well received by those in attendance.

You have many talents beyond making people laugh and you are sick and tired of others believing that you have no worth other than getting a laugh from a joke, prank, or pratfall. You have been called upon to entertain the king, the queen, and the attendants of this dinner, as you are called to entertain the king, the queen, and the attendants of every dinner.

Take every opportunity you get to impress your various skills, both comical and serious, on whoever will listen to you. You have noticed that there are powerful people in the room tonight and you realize that this may be a great chance for your true talents to be discovered.

You will be given further character information in other secret clues as the game progresses. Be sure to keep the clues, and this player booklet to yourself.

If you have any questions on your player profile, see the moderator.

FESTER ROYAL JESTER

This is the information that shapes the character that you are to play tonight. Take time to study the information on this page and begin to develop the character you will play tonight. Although you will not, and should not, be reading this information to other people, you will probably reveal all of it at some time during the evening's discussions. Again, you shouldn't show this booklet to anyone for any reason. Feel free to refer to this information during the evening's investigation.

You are one of two Royal Court Jesters. The two of you work as a team. Your partner, Fisk, (as you probably know) is also in the room today. You have been the Royal Court Jesters since you were discovered at a stand up jester competition at the town pub. Since that day you have been entertaining King George the First, Queen Marionette, the officials of the court, and their guests. Your talents go beyond humor. You are talented in other performing arts and you regularly combine them to make interesting productions that are always well received by those in attendance.

You have many talents beyond making people laugh and you are sick and tired of others believing that you have no worth other than getting a laugh from a joke, prank, or pratt fall. You have been called upon to entertain the king, the queen, and the attendants of this dinner, as you are called to entertain the king, the queen, and the attendants of every dinner.

Take every opportunity you get to impress your various skills, both comical and serious, on whoever will listen to you. You have noticed that there are powerful people in the room tonight and you realize that this may be a great chance for your true talents to be discovered.

You will be given further character information in other secret clues as the game progresses. Be sure to keep the clues, and this player booklet to yourself.

If you have any questions on your player profile, see the moderator.

LORD FENWICK MAGISTRATE OF HELSTON

This is the information that shapes the character that you are to play tonight. Take time to study the information on this page and begin to develop the character you will play tonight. Although you will not, and should not, be reading this information to other people, you will probably reveal all of it at some time during the evening's discussions. Again, you shouldn't show this booklet to anyone for any reason. Feel free to refer to this information during the evening's investigation.

You are a Royal Magistrate who was first appointed by King Regibald to serve as judge and jury over his kingdom. You have been given the power to execute justice over any and all who have dared to go against the proclamations of the king. King George the First decided to retain you after he assumed power. You are very well respected throughout the land as a fair and honest judge.

Today you have been asked to join the king for dinner because the king believes that there is someone within the castle who is here to contest the throne. He has asked you to weed out the traitor. You, along with the other magistrate, are to lead the investigation and determine who it is that is contesting the throne, why they are contesting it, and then you are to determine who the rightful king is.

But first you have to determine who the scoundrel is. Do this by interviewing each of the people in the room. Find out who they are, what their profession is, why they are in the room, who are their friends, who are their enemies, if they have anything interesting to say, etc.

Remember, this first round is designed so that you can get a good idea who is in the room, why they are in the room, what they do for a profession, and what their relationship is with the others in the room. Focus on finding out as much as you can about the people in the room during this first round. You will gain no information regarding the contesting of the throne in this round.

You will be working with the other magistrate as a team. The two of you may wish to alternate questioning and note taking. At the end of each round, or when the moderator wishes, you will have to recount all of the information you have gained during the round, so be prepared.

Again, start by asking for names, occupations, why they are in the room, who their friends are, who their enemies are, and if they have anything interesting to say. Follow the leads that you get while questioning one character to question another character. Don't be afraid to ask the moderator for some advice if you have a hard time getting started.

You will be given further character information in other secret clues as the game progresses. Be sure to keep the clues, and this player booklet to yourself.

If you have any questions on your player profile, see the moderator.

LORD GARFIELD MAGISTRATE OF HELSTON

This is the information that shapes the character that you are to play tonight. Take time to study the information on this page and begin to develop the character you will play tonight. Although you will not, and should not, be reading this information to other people, you will probably reveal all of it at some time during the evening's discussions. Again, you shouldn't show this booklet to anyone for any reason. Feel free to refer to this information during the evening's investigation.

You are a Royal Magistrate who was first appointed by King Regibald to serve as judge and jury over his kingdom. You have been given the power to execute justice over any and all who have dared to go against the proclamations of the king. King George the First decided to retain you after he assumed power. You are very well respected throughout the land as a fair and honest judge.

Today you have been asked to join the king for dinner because the king believes that there is someone within the castle who is here to contest the throne. He has asked you to weed out the traitor. You, along with the other magistrate, are to lead the investigation and determine who it is that is contesting the throne, why they are contesting it, and then you are to determine who the rightful king is.

But first you have to determine who the scoundrel is. Do this by interviewing each of the people in the room. Find out who they are, what their profession is, why they are in the room, who are their friends, who are their enemies, if they have anything interesting to say, etc.

Remember, this first round is designed so that you can get a good idea who is in the room, why they are in the room, what they do for a profession, and what their relationship is with the others in the room. Focus on finding out as much as you can about the people in the room during this first round. You will gain no information regarding the contesting of the throne in this round.

You will be working with the other magistrate as a team. The two of you may wish to alternate questioning and note taking. At the end of each round, or when the moderator wishes, you will have to recount all of the information you have gained during the round, so be prepared.

Again, start by asking for names, occupations, why they are in the room, who their friends are, who their enemies are, and if they have anything interesting to say. Follow the leads that you get while questioning one character to question another character. Don't be afraid to ask the moderator for some advice if you have a hard time getting started.

You will be given further character information in other secret clues as the game progresses. Be sure to keep the clues, and this player booklet to yourself.

If you have any questions on your player profile, see the moderator.

SECRET CLUES SORTED BY SECRET CLUE ROUNDS

BEGINNING OF ROUND TWO

KING GEORGE THE FIRST
KING OF HELSTON

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

During this round your rights to the throne you are now ruling on will begin to be questioned. You need to become well versed in the events surrounding your coronation so that you can defend your rights to the throne regardless of what others in the room say.

You were placed on the throne fifteen years ago when King Regibald died in battle. You were his most trusted adviser, and seeing that there were no relatives who survived the battles, he made a royal proclamation that placed you on the throne just before he died. Only yourself, and three others were present to hear his dying proclamation. Sir John of Truth, Braxton, and Sir Grayson were also there to hear King Regibald proclaim you as the new king. You promised Braxton that he would become the Head of the Royal Army; you promised Sir Grayson power and land; and you promised that Sir John of Truth, the good knight, will forever be given the job of protecting you. It wasn't that you were trying to buy them off, you were only hoping that by your generosity they would remain true to King Regibald's proclamation. They were the only witnesses. They were the only ones who could back your coronation. You knew you had to take care of them or there was no way you would remain king for long. Since that day you have been true to your word and they have been true to theirs.

It is only through the honor of that proclamation, and the word of Grayson, Braxton, and Sir John of Truth that you remain on the throne today. They may not stick to their word now that someone has contested the throne. You must stick by your story at all costs.

BEGINNING OF ROUND TWO

QUEEN MARIONETTE
QUEEN OF HELSTON

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

During this round your rights to the throne you are now ruling on will begin to be questioned. You need to become well versed in the events surrounding your coronation so that you can defend your rights to the throne regardless of what others in the room say.

You and your husband were placed on the throne fifteen years ago when King Regibald died in battle. Your husband was his most trusted adviser, and seeing that there were no relatives who survived the battles, he made a royal proclamation that placed him on the throne just before he died. Only your husband, and three others were present to hear his dying proclamation. Sir John of Truth, Braxton, and Sir Grayson were also there to hear King Regibald proclaim your husband as the new king. You were married to your husband at the time and that is the only reason why you became the Queen of Helston.

Braxton, Sir Grayson, and Sir John of Truth were promised positions of power within the new kingdom. It wasn't that your husband was trying to buy them off, he was only hoping that by his generosity they would remain true to King Regibald's proclamation. They were the only witnesses. They were the only ones who could back your coronation. Both you and your husband knew you had to take care of them or there was no way you would remain king and queen for long. Since that day you have been true to your word and they have been true to theirs.

It is only through the honor of that proclamation, and the word of Grayson, Braxton, and Sir John of Truth that you remain on the throne today. They may not stick to their word now that someone has contested the throne. You must stick by your husband, giving credit to his claim to the throne, at all costs.

BEGINNING OF ROUND TWO

SIR JOHN OF TRUTH
A ROYAL KNIGHT

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

One thing that you never got over was the shock of letting your king die while you were on duty. It wasn't your fault, but you'll never let yourself forget how it happened. You were standing at his back; watching, swinging your sword at all who came near, protecting your king, ready for any possible attack. Then four of them rushed at you at the same time. Two tackled you as you ran your sword through the third. It was the fourth, the scoundrel you couldn't see until you were on your back, who ran his sword through the back of King Regibald. It was a cowardly way to kill a king, but none the less, the king lie there bleeding, dying. The three men decided to run from the scene rather than stay and fight you, Sir George, Braxton, and Sir Grayson, who had come to King Regibald's aid when they saw the four rush you. All you could do was hold king Regibald's hand, and listen to his final proclamation, as his final life-blood ran out of him.

BEGINNING OF ROUND TWO

RACHEL
LADY OF ACTON

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

You have spent many hours listening to Queen Marionette tell you her worries, her concerns, and her fears. Sometimes she has told you more than she wished to say, giving you information that she wished she could take back.

It was during such a conversation that she told you that King George the First feared that King Regibald was speaking of someone other than he when he made the proclamation that put King George the First on the throne. Queen Marionette never did say who King George the First believed to be the true heir to the throne, only that he feared that he wasn't it.

You have kept this information to yourself since the day that she shared it with you, but this may be a good time to share the information with the Royal Magistrates.

BEGINNING OF ROUND TWO

GRAYSON
LORD OF COVENTRY

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

Sir John of Truth, the good knight, will recount the story of how it was that King Regibald died. The story is true as he describes. Back him if his rendition of the story is questioned. Braxton, the Head of the Royal Army will also tell of the events surrounding the death of King Regibald and his appointment as the Head of the Royal Army. Listen closely to their stories, for it is after their stories that you will be asked about your story.

You were present at the death of King Regibald, along with King George the First, Sir John of Truth, and Braxton. You clearly heard King Regibald proclaim King George the First as the next king of Helston. King George the First rose to his feet and you immediately bowed down at his feet in humble adoration and respect. It was then that he proclaimed that you were to be the lord of much land, that you would be wealthy, and that you would be taken care of for as long as you lived.

What a reward for being present for the death of one king and the proclamation of the next one. Without the proclamation of King George the First, you would own nothing.

BEGINNING OF ROUND TWO

ABIGAL
LADY OF COVENTRY

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

You will soon hear others in the room begin to say things that you have dreaded hearing for many years. In fact, you have dreaded hearing them since the day that your husband was given the power he now has. You've dreaded hearing others question the large amount of land that your husband was given as soon as King George the First was put on the throne. You have heard some of the peasant women on your land say that you have blackmailed the king into giving you land and that's the only reason why you are lord over it. They say that you have no right to the land and it is only a matter of time until the truth is revealed.

You have yet to hear any such rumors amongst members of the upper class and have dismissed the rumors from those of the lower class, claiming them as spiteful rumors begun out of jealousy of you, your husband, and your immense power.

You need to stand by the stories of your husband, Sir John of Truth, Braxton, and King George the First, and their wives. You need to do what you can to cast away all doubt as to their integrity and honor. Your position of power and wealth may depend on it.

BEGINNING OF ROUND TWO

HALSTEAD
LORD OF CANTERBURY

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

You have always suspected the events surrounding the coronation of King George the First. You have always been a loyal subject to him, but since the day that he was put on the throne you have suspected that he, Sir John of Truth, Braxton, and Grayson weren't telling the truth. Now that others have begun to question the king's rights to the throne this may be a good time for you to express your concerns.

Your concerns surround the quick proclamation and the immediate rise to power of those who 'witnessed' the proclamation. Before King George the First was named king, Sir John of Truth was just like any other member of the king's army. After the proclamation he was treated like royalty. He was given a room in the castle, he was allowed to dine with the king at every meal, and he was provided for in every way. This was not the way that any of the other knights in the royal army were treated, and this was not the way that the knight who is on duty the day the king is murdered is usually treated.

Grayson, Lord of Coventry rose to great power overnight as well. He had been an advisor to the king, but he had little land and power before the death of King Regibald. Upon the coronation of the king he had more land than anyone else in the kingdom and the power that went with it.

Braxton was also just an advisor to King Regibald. A promotion from advisor to Head of the Royal Army wasn't unheard of, but you suspect that the timing of the promotion was a bit suspect.

BEGINNING OF ROUND TWO

HEATHER
LADY OF CANTERBURY

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

You have always suspected the events surrounding the coronation of King George the First. You have always been a loyal subject to him, but since the day that he was put on the throne you have suspected that he, Sir John of Truth, Braxton, and Grayson weren't telling the truth. Now that others have begun to question the king's rights to the throne this may be a good time for you to express your concerns.

Your concerns surround the quick proclamation and the immediate rise to power of those who 'witnessed' the proclamation. Before King George the First was named king, Sir John of Truth was just like any other member of the king's army. After the proclamation he was treated like royalty. He was given a room in the castle, he was allowed to dine with the king at every meal, and he was provided for in every way. This was not the way that any of the other knights in the royal army were treated, and this was not the way that the knight who is on duty the day the king is murdered is usually treated.

Grayson, Lord of Coventry rose to great power overnight as well. He had been an advisor to the king, but he had little land and power before the death of King Regibald. Upon the coronation of the king he had more land than anyone else in the kingdom and the power that went with it.

Braxton was also just an advisor to King Regibald. A promotion from advisor to Head of the Royal Army wasn't unheard of, but you suspect that the timing of the promotion was a bit suspect.

BEGINNING OF ROUND TWO

BRAXTON
HEAD OF THE ROYAL ARMY

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

Sir John of Truth, the good knight, will recount the story of how it was that King Regibald died. The story is true as he describes. Back him if his rendition of the story is questioned. Listen closely to the story, for it is after this story that you will be asked about your story.

Before King Regibald died in battle he proclaimed that Sir George was to become the next king. The four of you were the only ones who heard the last proclamation of the dying king, a king you loved. You instantly vowed your allegiance to the new king. He immediately named you the Head of the Royal Army, right on the spot, without even considering any others for the position. Your official appointment was made right after the coronation of King George the First. You have been the Head of the Royal Army ever since.

Others are beginning to question the coronation of King George the First, the events surrounding the death of King Regibald, and the appointments that he made right after his coronation. Be ready to defend yourself against their accusations.

BEGINNING OF ROUND TWO

EBBA

WIFE OF THE HEAD OF THE ROYAL ARMY

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

Many of the rumors that will begin to circulate during this next round are not new news to you. You have been among the common people for years and you know that some of the common people have much more wisdom and insight than those who are in positions of authority. You trust the common people more than you trust those you know who are in positions of authority.

This is not good news for your husband. You are caught in a struggle between believing that your husband is telling the truth and that the common man is right. Follow your heart and don't be afraid to speak your opinion.

BEGINNING OF ROUND TWO

PUG

OWNER AND OPERATOR OF THE LOCAL PUB

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

Everybody knows that King George the First shouldn't be the king. Everyone knows that his position on the throne was fixed. Everyone knows that it is only a matter of time until the truth is known and the true king is revealed. You know that everyone knows because you are among the common people all day long - every day.

Today may be the day you have long awaited. Don't be afraid to be vocal with your beliefs. Don't be afraid to make accusations that you can't prove. Don't be afraid to call for the head of King George the First and the investigation into who should be the true king of the land.

BEGINNING OF ROUND TWO

YETTA

OWNER AND OPERATOR OF THE LOCAL PUB

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

Everybody knows that King George the First shouldn't be the king. Everyone knows that his position on the throne was fixed. Everyone knows that it is only a matter of time until the truth is known and the true king is revealed. You know that everyone knows because you are among the common people all day long - every day.

Today may be the day you have long awaited. Don't be afraid to be vocal with your beliefs. Don't be afraid to make accusations that you can't prove. Don't be afraid to call for the head of King George the First and the investigation into who should be the true king of the land.

BEGINNING OF ROUND TWO

ALISTAIR
THE BLACK KNIGHT

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

You are quite sure that King George the First shouldn't be the king. You were good friends with the members of the upper class in the Kingdom of Helston before you were kicked out. You know what kind of people are now ruling. You know that they are scoundrels who would do anything to get ahead.

You believe that they made up the story to put themselves in power. Isn't it curious that everyone who says they were there to hear the royal proclamation that made King George the First king of Helston now hold positions of great power in the land. You believe that this is no coincidence, but that the story was made up for their own benefit. Nobody else saw the rush on King Regibald. Who knows, maybe King George the First was the one who killed King Regibald and claimed the throne himself.

BEGINNING OF ROUND TWO

BELINDA
THE WENCH

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

You are quite sure that King George the First shouldn't be the king. Alistair was good friends with the members of the upper class in the Kingdom of Helston before he was kicked out. He knows what kind of people are now ruling. He knows, and has told you many times, that they are scoundrels who would do anything to get ahead.

You believe that they made up the story to put themselves in power. Isn't it curious that everyone who says they were there to hear the royal proclamation that made King George the First king of Helston now hold positions of great power in the land. You believe that this is no coincidence, but that the story was made up for their own benefit. Nobody else saw the rush on King Regibald. Who knows, maybe King George the First was the one who killed King Regibald and claimed the throne himself.

BEGINNING OF ROUND TWO

SMEDLEY
THE ROYAL BLACKSMITH

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

All of the common people question the coronation of King George the First. All of them doubt that he should be the king, but you don't really care. You have pledged your allegiance to the throne and you will be true to whoever sits on that throne, whether he be a good king or a bad king.

King George the First has treated you well and you see no reason why anyone would want to disrupt a good thing. The economy is great, the people are prospering under his reign, there have been no threats of wars; what could be better?

BEGINNING OF ROUND TWO

RAE
THE ROYAL BAKER

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

All of the common people question the coronation of King George the First. All of them doubt that he should be the king, but you don't really care. You have pledged your allegiance to the throne and you will be true to whoever sits on that throne, whether he be a good king or a bad king.

King George the First has treated you well and you see no reason why anyone would want to disrupt a good thing. The economy is great, the people are prospering under his reign, there have been no threats of wars; what could be better?

BEGINNING OF ROUND TWO

FLETCHER
THE PEASANT

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

Boy, if you knew that this kind of a thing was going to happen at tonight's feast you would have preferred to be left in the market place and allowed to go home. You care little for the things of kings, queens, royal magistrates, and all of the power struggles that go along with putting them together in a room and letting them fight it all out.

Refuse to take part in the arguments taking place and ask to be excused from the chaos. If you are pressed to answer any questions then you should explain the plight of the common peasant and plead with those in the room to do something about it.

BEGINNING OF ROUND TWO

DARBY
THE PEASANT

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

Boy, if you knew that this kind of a thing was going to happen at tonight's feast you would have preferred to be left in the market place and allowed to go home. You care little for the things of kings, queens, royal magistrates, and all of the power struggles that go along with putting them together in a room and letting them fight it all out.

Refuse to take part in the arguments taking place and ask to be excused from the chaos. If you are pressed to answer any questions then you should explain the plight of the common peasant and plead with those in the room to do something about it.

BEGINNING OF ROUND TWO

FISK
ROYAL JESTER

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

What a joke! You'll be able to gain months' worth of material from the conversation that will be taking place in this round. People's tempers have risen to a point you've never seen at a king's evening feast before.

This may be a good time for you to offer your services as a problem-solver, a big thinker, a jack of all trades, and a new perspective to a kingly problem. Try to act as a mediator to the mess that's about to break out over the coronation of King George the First.

BEGINNING OF ROUND TWO

FESTER
ROYAL JESTER

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

What a joke! You'll be able to gain months' worth of material from the conversation that will be taking place in this round. People's tempers have risen to a point you've never seen at a king's evening feast before.

This may be a good time for you to offer your services as a problem-solver, a big thinker, a jack of all trades, and a new perspective to a kingly problem. Try to act as a mediator to the mess that's about to break out over the coronation of King George the First.

BEGINNING OF ROUND TWO

LORD FENWICK
MAGISTRATE OF HELSTON

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

During the second round we will find out the true story of the death of King Regibald. We will also learn what others in the room have to say about the coronation of King George the First. Don't worry, once a few opinions have been offered, it won't be that hard to get others to tell what they think about the death of King Regibald and the coronation of King George the First.

In order to end this round you must be able to tell the story of King Regibald's death, and remember who was there to witness it. You must also tell the moderator what each of the people in the room think about the coronation of King George the First.

You should adhere to the following order of questioning:

King George the First

Queen Marionette

Sir John of Truth

Braxton

Grayson

and then the rest of the others in no particular order.

BEGINNING OF ROUND TWO

LORD GARFIELD
MAGISTRATE OF HELSTON

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

During the second round we will find out the true story of the death of King Regibald. We will also learn what others in the room have to say about the coronation of King George the First. Don't worry, once a few opinions have been offered, it won't be that hard to get others to tell what they think about the death of King Regibald and the coronation of King George the First.

In order to end this round you must be able to tell the story of King Regibald's death, and remember who was there to witness it. You must also tell the moderator what each of the people in the room think about the coronation of King George the First.

You should adhere to the following order of questioning:

King George the First

Queen Marionette

Sir John of Truth

Braxton

Grayson

and then the rest of the others in no particular order.

END OF ROUND TWO

LORD GARFIELD
MAGISTRATE OF HELSTON

The following is to be read out loud:

It has come to my attention that someone in the room wishes to contest the rights to the throne and the rights to become King of Helston. According to royal law, once the throne is contested by one, all who are in the presence of the king are allowed to contest it as well.

If any of you wish to address the court regarding your claim to the throne, the next round is the time for you to speak your peace. After that the true King of Helston is to be chosen and all others will be dealt with accordingly.

BEGINNING OF ROUND THREE

KING GEORGE THE FIRST
KING OF HELSTON

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

Your claim to the throne has been clearly stated during the first two rounds of this game. Stick to your story and firmly argue against anyone who claims that you are lying.

Do what you can to make others look foolish in their frivolous claims to the throne you now rule upon.

BEGINNING OF ROUND THREE

QUEEN MARIONETTE
QUEEN OF HELSTON

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

Your claim to the throne has been clearly stated during the first two rounds of this game. Stick to your story and firmly argue against anyone who claims that you are lying.

Do what you can to make others look foolish in their frivolous claims to the throne you now rule upon.

BEGINNING OF ROUND THREE

SIR JOHN OF TRUTH
A ROYAL KNIGHT

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

You know who the true King of Helston is to be. You will reveal this information when the time is right. Now isn't the right time. You have evidence that will prove the true king beyond a shadow of a doubt. You believe that this isn't the right time to reveal the truth for you do not know if the Royal Magistrates are loyal to the throne or who is now sitting on the throne.

Listen carefully to the claims to the throne because you will not be told who the new king is until the fourth round. You too will be given a chance to venture a guess during the fourth round, but it is your character who knows and reveals the truth in the story.

Again, your character reveals the truth in the story, but YOU will be given a chance to guess who is the rightful heir to the throne in the game.

BEGINNING OF ROUND THREE

RACHEL
LADY OF ACTON

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

You believe that King George the First should not be the rightful king and you believe that we should calmly listen to those who have made a claim to the throne and let them speak their peace. It is then up to the royal magistrates to make a decision.

Do what you can to encourage open communication and let those who wish to speak, say their peace.

BEGINNING OF ROUND THREE

GRAYSON
LORD OF COVENTRY

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

This is the chance you have been waiting for. Deep in your heart you know that King Regibald wasn't pointing at Sir George when he made the proclamation, he was pointing at you. This is your chance to say that King George the First got it all wrong. You've been going along with him for the 15 years because of the bribes that he has been giving you. You've had enough of it and now you're claiming your right to the throne.

Remember, your claim is that King Regibald was talking about you on the battle field, and not Sir George.

If you feel that your claim to the throne will not be upheld then you should support whoever you feel has the strongest claim in the hopes that he or she will reward you with a position of power and wealth under their reign.

Think through your claim to the throne. Be ready to present your case to Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield, for it is they who are to decide who the King of Helston shall be.

BEGINNING OF ROUND THREE

ABIGAL
LADY OF COVENTRY

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

Your husband will soon be making some great claims. You should support him in everything that he says, for he is sure to take you along with him into power.

BEGINNING OF ROUND THREE

HALSTEAD
LORD OF CANTERBURY

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

This is the chance you have been waiting for. You have been around royalty for many years, wishing you had the chance to become king, and this may be your only chance. You've been a high ranking part of the Kingdom of Helston for many years. You've seen a few kings come and go, both in battle, through sickness, and crimes of the heart. You believe that the throne should belong to you because of this knowledge and you believe that you would be the best person for the throne, since there are no others who are rightful heirs.

Think through your claim to the throne. Be ready to present your case to Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield, for it is they who are to decide who the King of Helston shall be.

BEGINNING OF ROUND THREE

HEATHER
LADY OF CANTERBURY

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

This is the chance you and your husband have been waiting for. Your husband has been around royalty for many years, wishing he had the chance to become king, and this may be his only chance. He has been a high ranking part of the Kingdom of Helston for many years. He's seen a few kings come and go, both in battle, through sickness, and crimes of the heart. He believes that the throne should belong to him because of this knowledge and you believe that he would be the best person for the throne, since there are no others who are rightful heirs.

Think through your husband's claim to the throne. Support your husband any way you can. Be ready to present your case to Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield, for it is they who are to decide who the King of Helston shall be.

BEGINNING OF ROUND THREE

BRAXTON
HEAD OF THE ROYAL ARMY

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

This is the chance you have been waiting for. You have been around royalty for many years, wishing you had the chance to become king, and this may be your only chance. You've been a high ranking part of the Kingdom of Helston for many years. You've seen a few kings come and go, both in battle, through sickness, and crimes of the heart. You have proven yourself useful to the King of Helston, whoever that may be, in battle and in times of peace. You believe that the throne should belong to you because of your knowledge and the way you have proven yourself. You believe that you would be the best person for the throne, since there are no others who are rightful heirs.

Think through your claim to the throne. Be ready to present your case to Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield, for it is they who are to decide who the King of Helston shall be.

BEGINNING OF ROUND THREE

EBBA

WIFE OF THE HEAD OF THE ROYAL ARMY

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

This is the chance you and your husband have been waiting for. Your husband has been around royalty for many years, wishing he had the chance to become king, and this may be his only chance. He has been a high ranking part of the Kingdom of Helston for many years. He's seen a few kings come and go, both in battle, through sickness, and crimes of the heart. He has proven to be useful to the King of Helston, whoever that may be, in battle and in times of peace. He believes that the throne should belong to him because of his unique knowledge and the way he has proven himself. You believe that he would be the best person for the throne, since there are no others who are rightful heirs.

Think through your husband's claim to the throne. Support your husband any way you can. Be ready to present your case to Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield, for it is they who are to decide who the King of Helston shall be.

BEGINNING OF ROUND THREE

PUG

OWNER AND OPERATOR OF THE LOCAL PUB

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

This is the chance you have been waiting for. A common man become king?!? Well, the thought may be a little hard to swallow, but after all, you know the heart of the common man like no other person in the room. All walks of life have come through your pub at one time or another, to have an ale, to have dinner, or to have a room. You've heard the concerns of the common man and believe that it's about time a common man became a king.

Think through your claim to the throne. Be ready to present your case to Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield, for it is they who are to decide who the King of Helston shall be.

BEGINNING OF ROUND THREE

YETTA

OWNER AND OPERATOR OF THE LOCAL PUB

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

This is the chance you have been waiting for. A common man become king?!? Well, the thought may be a little hard to swallow, but after all, you know the heart of the common man like no other person in the room. All walks of life have come through your pub at one time or another, to have an ale, to have dinner, or to have a room. You've heard the concerns of the common man and believe that it's about time a common man became a king.

Think through your claim to the throne. Be ready to present your case to Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield, for it is they who are to decide who the King of Helston shall be.

BEGINNING OF ROUND THREE

ALISTAIR
THE BLACK KNIGHT

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

This is the chance you have been waiting for. You're sick and tired of weak men being the king. It's about time that this kingdom had a warrior as king and ruler of the land. Call for a competition to determine who it is that should be the rightful king. What's up with having a weak king. It's not good for wars, it doesn't scare away contenders, and it's just not fair. You have to waste your life and talents just because the cowardly King George the First is on the throne and you can't do anything about it. No way!

Think through your claim to the throne. Be ready to present your case to Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield, for it is they who are to decide who the King of Helston shall be.

BEGINNING OF ROUND THREE

BELINDA
THE WENCH

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

This is the chance you have been waiting for. Women have had the wrong end of the stick for far too long. You've had enough of doing whatever Alistair tells you to do. You want to be your own boss, and more. It's about time for the women of the kingdom to rebel and not do any of the housework. Then their concerns will be listened to and they'll begin to get the respect they deserve. Try to get the other women in the room to agree with you and your arguments.

Wouldn't this kingdom be much better off if there wasn't a king!?! Call for the coronation of a queen who is then able to select a husband who will be a non-ruling male.

Think through your claim to the throne. Be ready to present your case to Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield, for it is they who are to decide who the King of Helston shall be.

BEGINNING OF ROUND THREE

SMEDLEY
THE ROYAL BLACKSMITH

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

For years you've been silently working alongside of your brother, King Regibald, even though nobody knew he was your brother. Your mother told you that she raised the two of you separately because she believed your father would have killed you so that there would only be one heir to his throne. You knew that your life would be in danger if you revealed your true identity while King George the First was on the throne, but now that you have a chance to reveal the truth without fear for your life you have nothing to lose.

Look for a good opportunity to reveal that you are the true King of Helston.

BEGINNING OF ROUND THREE

RAE
THE ROYAL BAKER

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

This is the big chance you have been waiting for. Nobody knows it, but there was a time when King Regibald was sick and thought to be dying of the scarlet fever. The doctor ordered that you make him a stew with the finest herbal ingredients. It was believed that your stew was what saved the life of King Regibald. If only you were on the battle field when he needed you most!

King Regibald thanked you for saving his life by writing a letter that said if ever there was a chance for you to become the Queen of Helston, that you were to be crowned at once. Unfortunately, that letter was stolen from you. But you can still claim that it existed, even though you never told a soul about it, and use that letter as your claim to the throne.

Think through your claim to the throne. Be ready to present your case to Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield, for it is they who are to decide who the King of Helston shall be.

BEGINNING OF ROUND THREE

FLETCHER
THE PEASANT

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

Who are you to claim rights to the throne? You're just a simple peasant living your life quietly. You don't know what you would possibly do with all of the duties and responsibilities of a king. There is no way that you're going to contest the throne and what you really wish is that you could get out of here and get home to attend to your ailing mother. The sooner this whole mess is solved the better off you'll be.

BEGINNING OF ROUND THREE

DARBY
THE PEASANT

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

Who are you to claim rights to the throne? You're just a simple peasant living your life quietly. You don't know what you would possibly do with all of the duties and responsibilities of a king. There is no way that you're going to contest the throne and what you really wish is that you could get out of here and get home to attend to your ailing mother. The sooner this whole mess is solved the better off you'll be.

BEGINNING OF ROUND THREE

FISK
ROYAL JESTER

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

This is the chance you've been looking for. You've believed all along that you are an illegitimate child of King Regibald. It was the King himself who told you of his affair with a lady of the court and the secret birth of the child he wanted to have near him, but couldn't. As you got older it was easy to see that you had a knack for entertaining people and that is when he called you to be his Royal Jester, not so much for the entertainment, but just to have you near him.

King Regibald told you to keep quiet about your true royal lineage until the right time. Now is the right time!

Your jester partner may try to discredit you. Do what you can to convince the Royal Magistrates that you are the true heir to the throne regardless of what others have to say.

Think through your claim to the throne. Be ready to present your case to Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield, for it is they who are to decide who the King and/or Queen of Helston shall be.

BEGINNING OF ROUND THREE

FESTER
ROYAL JESTER

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

This is the chance you've been looking for. You've believed all along that you are an illegitimate child of King Regibald. It was the King himself who told you of his affair with a lady of the court and the secret birth of the child he wanted to have near him, but couldn't. As you got older it was easy to see that you had a knack for entertaining people and that is when he called you to be his Royal Jester, not so much for the entertainment, but just to have you near him.

King Regibald told you to keep quiet about your true royal lineage until the right time. Now is the right time!

Your jester partner may try to discredit you. Do what you can to convince the Royal Magistrates that you are the true heir to the throne regardless of what others have to say.

Think through your claim to the throne. Be ready to present your case to Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield, for it is they who are to decide who the King and/or Queen of Helston shall be.

BEGINNING OF ROUND THREE

LORD FENWICK
MAGISTRATE OF HELSTON

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

Now you've really got a mess on your hands. Now that one has contested the throne you just know that everyone else will have something to say about it. If only you'd failed out of law school, then you wouldn't be here right now to sort out this whole mess. Oh well, you have to make the best of it, so organize your investigation and be sure to uncover as many clues as you can.

Begin to listen to the claims to the throne. Listen to each one, ask questions, and seek truthful answers, for it is you and Lord Garfield who will have to decide who the true King of Helston is.

You must give each person a chance to claim their right to the throne and then begin to ask others in the room what they think about the cases that others are presenting. Don't offer any suggestions as to who you believe the rightful King of Helston is, that needs to be saved until Round Four.

BEGINNING OF ROUND THREE

LORD GARFIELD
MAGISTRATE OF HELSTON

The information that you are given in your secret clues is to be carefully read and kept secret. You need to study the information given to you in each secret clue because this information is what controls the round we are about to play. Read each word carefully and begin to plan how you will react to the information given to you. Don't be afraid to refer to the clues as the round progresses. Ask the moderator for more information if anything in this clue doesn't make sense to you.

Remember: you can cast blame on others, mislead the investigators, or try to keep others from finding out too much, but you cannot lie about the information in your player booklet or secret clues.

If the information that is revealed in this secret clue contains information regarding a character that isn't part of the game tonight, you can consider the information to be a dead lead and use it to cast blame on others.

Now you've really got a mess on your hands. Now that one has contested the throne you just know that everyone else will have something to say about it. If only you'd failed out of law school, then you wouldn't be here right now to sort out this whole mess. Oh well, you have to make the best of it, so organize your investigation and be sure to uncover as many clues as you can.

Begin to listen to the claims to the throne. Listen to each one, ask questions, and seek truthful answers, for it is you and Lord Fenwick who will have to decide who the true King of Helston is.

You must give each person a chance to claim their right to the throne and then begin to ask others in the room what they think about the cases that others are presenting. Don't offer any suggestions as to who you believe the rightful King of Helston is, that needs to be saved until Round Four.

BEGINNING OF ROUND FOUR

KING GEORGE THE FIRST
KING OF HELSTON

You have received all of the information that you will be receiving. All character information, all questioning, and all debating is over. You are now to use all of the information that you have gained to determine who the rightful King and Queen of Helston is to be. Everyone in the room has a motive, an opportunity, and a claim to the throne. The true king and queen can be mixed pairs of friends, married couples, or bitter enemies. Even Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield are eligible to be crowned King of Helston.

Good Luck!

The following is one final clue that may help you solve the case:

Sir John of Truth isn't telling the whole truth.

BEGINNING OF ROUND FOUR

QUEEN MARIONETTE
QUEEN OF HELSTON

You have received all of the information that you will be receiving. All character information, all questioning, and all debating is over. You are now to use all of the information that you have gained to determine who the rightful King and Queen of Helston is to be. Everyone in the room has a motive, an opportunity, and a claim to the throne. The true king and queen can be mixed pairs of friends, married couples, or bitter enemies. Even Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield are eligible to be crowned King of Helston.

Good Luck!

The following is one final clue that may help you solve the case:

King Regibald was 35 years old when he was killed.

BEGINNING OF ROUND FOUR

SIR JOHN OF TRUTH
A ROYAL KNIGHT

You have received all of the information that you will be receiving. All character information, all questioning, and all debating is over. You are now to use all of the information that you have gained to determine who the rightful King and Queen of Helston is to be. Everyone in the room has a motive, an opportunity, and a claim to the throne. The true king and queen can be mixed pairs of friends, married couples, or bitter enemies. Even Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield are eligible to be crowned King of Helston.

Good Luck!

The following is one final clue that may help you solve the case:

King Regibald was, at one time, a widower.

BEGINNING OF ROUND FOUR

RACHEL
LADY OF ACTON

You have received all of the information that you will be receiving. All character information, all questioning, and all debating is over. You are now to use all of the information that you have gained to determine who the rightful King and Queen of Helston is to be. Everyone in the room has a motive, an opportunity, and a claim to the throne. The true king and queen can be mixed pairs of friends, married couples, or bitter enemies. Even Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield are eligible to be crowned King of Helston.

Good Luck!

The following is one final clue that may help you solve the case:

Fester, the Royal Jester, isn't an illegitimate child.

BEGINNING OF ROUND FOUR

GRAYSON
LORD OF COVENTRY

You have received all of the information that you will be receiving. All character information, all questioning, and all debating is over. You are now to use all of the information that you have gained to determine who the rightful King and Queen of Helston is to be. Everyone in the room has a motive, an opportunity, and a claim to the throne. The true king and queen can be mixed pairs of friends, married couples, or bitter enemies. Even Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield are eligible to be crowned King of Helston.

Good Luck!

The following is one final clue that may help you solve the case:

You mother always said, "Never get married and have children."

BEGINNING OF ROUND FOUR

ABIGAL
LADY OF COVENTRY

You have received all of the information that you will be receiving. All character information, all questioning, and all debating is over. You are now to use all of the information that you have gained to determine who the rightful King and Queen of Helston is to be. Everyone in the room has a motive, an opportunity, and a claim to the throne. The true king and queen can be mixed pairs of friends, married couples, or bitter enemies. Even Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield are eligible to be crowned King of Helston.

Good Luck!

The following is one final clue that may help you solve the case:

Children are awfully expensive to raise.

BEGINNING OF ROUND FOUR

HALSTEAD
LORD OF CANTERBURY

You have received all of the information that you will be receiving. All character information, all questioning, and all debating is over. You are now to use all of the information that you have gained to determine who the rightful King and Queen of Helston is to be. Everyone in the room has a motive, an opportunity, and a claim to the throne. The true king and queen can be mixed pairs of friends, married couples, or bitter enemies. Even Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield are eligible to be crowned King of Helston.

Good Luck!

The following is one final clue that may help you solve the case:

You found something valuable in the market place.

BEGINNING OF ROUND FOUR

HEATHER
LADY OF CANTERBURY

You have received all of the information that you will be receiving. All character information, all questioning, and all debating is over. You are now to use all of the information that you have gained to determine who the rightful King and Queen of Helston is to be. Everyone in the room has a motive, an opportunity, and a claim to the throne. The true king and queen can be mixed pairs of friends, married couples, or bitter enemies. Even Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield are eligible to be crowned King of Helston.

Good Luck!

The following is one final clue that may help you solve the case:

King George The First is not the true King.

BEGINNING OF ROUND FOUR

BRAXTON
HEAD OF THE ROYAL ARMY

You have received all of the information that you will be receiving. All character information, all questioning, and all debating is over. You are now to use all of the information that you have gained to determine who the rightful King and Queen of Helston is to be. Everyone in the room has a motive, an opportunity, and a claim to the throne. The true king and queen can be mixed pairs of friends, married couples, or bitter enemies. Even Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield are eligible to be crowned King of Helston.

Good Luck!

The following is one final clue that may help you solve the case:

King Regibald knew the identity of the true King before he died.

BEGINNING OF ROUND FOUR

EBBA

WIFE OF THE HEAD OF THE ROYAL ARMY

You have received all of the information that you will be receiving. All character information, all questioning, and all debating is over. You are now to use all of the information that you have gained to determine who the rightful King and Queen of Helston is to be. Everyone in the room has a motive, an opportunity, and a claim to the throne. The true king and queen can be mixed pairs of friends, married couples, or bitter enemies. Even Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield are eligible to be crowned King of Helston.

Good Luck!

The following is one final clue that may help you solve the case:

King Regibald was not without relatives when he died.

BEGINNING OF ROUND FOUR

PUG
OWNER AND OPERATOR OF THE LOCAL PUB

You have received all of the information that you will be receiving. All character information, all questioning, and all debating is over. You are now to use all of the information that you have gained to determine who the rightful King and Queen of Helston is to be. Everyone in the room has a motive, an opportunity, and a claim to the throne. The true king and queen can be mixed pairs of friends, married couples, or bitter enemies. Even Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield are eligible to be crowned King of Helston.

Good Luck!

The following is one final clue that may help you solve the case:

As King Regibald died he did proclaim who the next King and/or Queen would be.

BEGINNING OF ROUND FOUR

YETTA

OWNER AND OPERATOR OF THE LOCAL PUB

You have received all of the information that you will be receiving. All character information, all questioning, and all debating is over. You are now to use all of the information that you have gained to determine who the rightful King and Queen of Helston is to be. Everyone in the room has a motive, an opportunity, and a claim to the throne. The true king and queen can be mixed pairs of friends, married couples, or bitter enemies. Even Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield are eligible to be crowned King of Helston.

Good Luck!

The following is one final clue that may help you solve the case:

Sir John of Truth found a letter in a secret hiding place.

BEGINNING OF ROUND FOUR

ALISTAIR
THE BLACK KNIGHT

You have received all of the information that you will be receiving. All character information, all questioning, and all debating is over. You are now to use all of the information that you have gained to determine who the rightful King and Queen of Helston is to be. Everyone in the room has a motive, an opportunity, and a claim to the throne. The true king and queen can be mixed pairs of friends, married couples, or bitter enemies. Even Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield are eligible to be crowned King of Helston.

Good Luck!

The following is one final clue that may help you solve the case:

The new King and Queen will rule with kindness.

BEGINNING OF ROUND FOUR

BELINDA
THE WENCH

You have received all of the information that you will be receiving. All character information, all questioning, and all debating is over. You are now to use all of the information that you have gained to determine who the rightful King and Queen of Helston is to be. Everyone in the room has a motive, an opportunity, and a claim to the throne. The true king and queen can be mixed pairs of friends, married couples, or bitter enemies. Even Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield are eligible to be crowned King of Helston.

Good Luck!

The following is one final clue that may help you solve the case:

Fisk, the Royal Jester, isn't an illegitimate child.

BEGINNING OF ROUND FOUR

SMEDLEY
THE ROYAL BLACKSMITH

You have received all of the information that you will be receiving. All character information, all questioning, and all debating is over. You are now to use all of the information that you have gained to determine who the rightful King and Queen of Helston is to be. Everyone in the room has a motive, an opportunity, and a claim to the throne. The true king and queen can be mixed pairs of friends, married couples, or bitter enemies. Even Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield are eligible to be crowned King of Helston.

Good Luck!

The following is one final clue that may help you solve the case:

King Regibald loved to hear fairy tales as a child.

BEGINNING OF ROUND FOUR

RAE
THE ROYAL BAKER

You have received all of the information that you will be receiving. All character information, all questioning, and all debating is over. You are now to use all of the information that you have gained to determine who the rightful King and Queen of Helston is to be. Everyone in the room has a motive, an opportunity, and a claim to the throne. The true king and queen can be mixed pairs of friends, married couples, or bitter enemies. Even Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield are eligible to be crowned King of Helston.

Good Luck!

The following is one final clue that may help you solve the case:

King Regibald would know the true heir if he saw them.

BEGINNING OF ROUND FOUR

FLETCHER
THE PEASANT

You have received all of the information that you will be receiving. All character information, all questioning, and all debating is over. You are now to use all of the information that you have gained to determine who the rightful King and Queen of Helston is to be. Everyone in the room has a motive, an opportunity, and a claim to the throne. The true king and queen can be mixed pairs of friends, married couples, or bitter enemies. Even Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield are eligible to be crowned King of Helston.

Good Luck!

The following is one final clue that may help you solve the case:

King Regibald wasn't prepared to die.

BEGINNING OF ROUND FOUR

DARBY
THE PEASANT

You have received all of the information that you will be receiving. All character information, all questioning, and all debating is over. You are now to use all of the information that you have gained to determine who the rightful King and Queen of Helston is to be. Everyone in the room has a motive, an opportunity, and a claim to the throne. The true king and queen can be mixed pairs of friends, married couples, or bitter enemies. Even Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield are eligible to be crowned King of Helston.

Good Luck!

The following is one final clue that may help you solve the case:

Fletcher and Darby do not have the same mother.

BEGINNING OF ROUND FOUR

FISK
ROYAL JESTER

You have received all of the information that you will be receiving. All character information, all questioning, and all debating is over. You are now to use all of the information that you have gained to determine who the rightful King and Queen of Helston is to be. Everyone in the room has a motive, an opportunity, and a claim to the throne. The true king and queen can be mixed pairs of friends, married couples, or bitter enemies. Even Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield are eligible to be crowned King of Helston.

Good Luck!

The following is one final clue that may help you solve the case:

Why was it that nobody called a nurse?

BEGINNING OF ROUND FOUR

FESTER
ROYAL JESTER

You have received all of the information that you will be receiving. All character information, all questioning, and all debating is over. You are now to use all of the information that you have gained to determine who the rightful King and Queen of Helston is to be. Everyone in the room has a motive, an opportunity, and a claim to the throne. The true king and queen can be mixed pairs of friends, married couples, or bitter enemies. Even Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield are eligible to be crowned King of Helston.

Good Luck!

The following is one final clue that may help you solve the case:

The true Royal couple have known each other for years.

BEGINNING OF ROUND FOUR

LORD FENWICK
MAGISTRATE OF HELSTON

You have received all of the information that you will be receiving. All character information, all questioning, and all debating is over. You are now to use all of the information that you have gained to determine who the rightful King and Queen of Helston is to be. Everyone in the room has a motive, an opportunity, and a claim to the throne. The true king and queen can be mixed pairs of friends, married couples, or bitter enemies. Even Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield are eligible to be crowned King of Helston.

Good Luck!

The following is one final clue that may help you solve the case:

Queen Marionette will no longer be the queen.

BEGINNING OF ROUND FOUR

LORD GARFIELD
MAGISTRATE OF HELSTON

You have received all of the information that you will be receiving. All character information, all questioning, and all debating is over. You are now to use all of the information that you have gained to determine who the rightful King and Queen of Helston is to be. Everyone in the room has a motive, an opportunity, and a claim to the throne. The true king and queen can be mixed pairs of friends, married couples, or bitter enemies. Even Lord Fenwick and Lord Garfield are eligible to be crowned King of Helston.

Good Luck!

The following is one final clue that may help you solve the case:

Sir John of Truth knew who the rightful heir was.